A Helping Hand Is In The Bag

(NAPSA)—Those on crutches know that on top of being in pain, getting around is a major pain. Adding insult to injury, there's no easy way to carry your things with both hands gripping crutches.

When you're knocked off your feet, you can use a helping hand. Now people on crutches can carry their stuff along.

Demonstrating that necessity can be the mother of invention, an injured skier developed a clever saddlebag-type tote that straps easily to any underarm crutch. This instant, hands-free carry bag has two roomy pockets to hold a range of items, from folding umbrellas to business reports.

The versatile Crutch Tote™ fits underarm crutches of all heights (simply tuck the bottom pocket up for use with children's crutches). It attaches easily with Velcro straps and is made of rugged machine-washable denim. What's more, once you're up on both feet again, it makes a handy car or closet organizer. It's also a great gift idea.
