

A Puzzling Question Is Answered

(NAPSA)—The second book in Debbie Macomber's Cedar Cove series, 204 Rosewood Lane (MIRA Books, $7.50), answers the question that's been puzzling her fans for months: What happened to Dan?

Grace Sherman's husband, Dan, suddenly disappeared with no explanation in the first novel in the series, 16 Lighthouse Road, a New York Times bestseller last fall. Rumors suggested that he'd taken off with a new woman.

While Grace and her daughters try to come to terms with Dan's disappearance, her friends in Cedar Cove are her support system and her solace. But life isn't standing still for them these days, either.

Justine, daughter of family court judge Olivia Lockhart, has made a hasty marriage to childhood friend Seth Gunderson. Though they seem to be truly in love, a former suitor is hoping she'll reconsider. He shows up to press his suit just as Justine is feeling discouraged by her husband's long absences as captain of an Alaskan fishing vessel.

Grace's daughters are showing the strain of dealing with their dad's disappearance. Then, just as the reasons behind Dan's disappearance are revealed, a stranger comes to town, books in to the local bed-and-breakfast—and turns up dead the next morning. No one knows who he was or why he came to Cedar Cove.

Debbie Macomber is known for her honest, humorous and touching portrayals of ordinary women in small town America. Her new book is available at bookstores or www.mirabooks.com.
