Are Energy Issues On Your Mind?

(NAPSA)—A recent survey shows energy is a top-of-the mind issue for consumers.

Of particular concern are high energy prices, and a dependable energy supply.

A wise energy policy can lead to a strong economy and healthy environment.

According to Edison Electric Institute, the price of energy, as with all products, is affected by its demand and supply. More demand or less supply will lead to higher prices.

America's electric companies believe that to achieve a stable and secure energy future, the country will have to take action on both the supply and the demand side of the issue.

On the supply side, more power plants and electric transmission wires are needed to keep pace with economic and population growth. On the demand side, consumers and businesses will need to do their part by using their energy more efficiently.

With today's energy-efficient products, some simple tips and information, and innovative electric company programs, it's easier than ever for consumers to save energy. Using energy efficiently can save them money and make their homes more comfortable too.
