

VIDEO GAMES MAKE LIFE MORE FUN

Beloved TV Characters Can Come Along For The Ride; Perfect For That Summer Trip

(NAPSA)—For youngsters who can't get enough of the characters from their favorite popular TV shows and movies, two new games offer a new mobile alternative to sitting in front of the TV all summer long.

Published by Disney Interactive Studios for the Nintendo DS video game system, High School Musical 2: Work This Out! and Cory in the House provide a unique entertainment opportunity for fans of, respectively, the hit movie franchise and a popular family-friendly series.

Musical Adventure

High School Musical 2: Work This Out! allows fans of the popular Disney Channel movie franchise to dive into the world of the Lava Springs Resort in an all new musical adventure game. The game is inspired by "High School Musical 2," with storylines that extend well beyond the hit movie sequel.

Fans can play as their favorite characters—Troy, Gabriella, Sharpay, Ryan, Chad and Taylor—to explore the Lava Springs Resort as seen in the movie. Throughout the game, players go on various adventures, compete in time-based challenges and play different rhythm games, all while listening to all 10 songs from the film. High School Musical 2: Work This Out!, rated E for Everyone, is the fourth title in the hit video game series based on the "High School Musical" films. A White House Adventure

In "Cory in the House," fans

take on the role of Cory Baxter—a regular kid who happens to live in the White House, where his dad is the Presidential chef.

The video game for Nintendo DS finds Cory trying to foil the plans of an evil toymaker who is plotting to take over Washington, D.C.—with the help of Cory's prize-winning Presidential bobble heads. Players must use their wits (and a host of cool gadgets) to navigate the city and save the day. Fans of the show, a spin-off from the Disney Channel hit "That's So Raven," can also rock out and play in Cory's band, DC3, with his friends Meena and Newt.

Available for Nintendo DS and rated E for Everyone, Cory in the House lets fans take the adventures of Cory Baxter with them wherever they go—helping to make summer travel even more fun. To learn more, visit www.disneyinteractivestudios.com.
