Discovering Scotland

Scotland offers much more than breathtaking views, bagpipers and tartan-print kilts. Consider the Edinburgh Festival—the largest arts festival in the world—or St. Andrews, the home of golf. Think Stirling with the historic battle sites of William Wallace and the Highlands, with centuries-old castles.

People with Scottish ancestors have a unique connection to Scotland, and even more of a reason to visit. A new Web site has been created to help people of Scottish heritage travel home to experience the culture, lifestyle and landscape of a country which has shaped the lives of more than 28 million people around the world.

The site, AncestralScotland.com, helps users dig into their backgrounds; you never know who you might be related to. You could discover that royal blood flows through your veins, or that you share your ancestral homeland with business tycoon Donald Trump or actress Julianne Moore.
