Get Your Own Home On The Web

(NAPSA)—Here's a unique gift idea: Give someone his or her own corner of the World Wide Web this holiday season.

Whether it's a launching point for your own small business or just a place to share family news and pictures, having your very own Web site has a wide variety of uses.

For the writer or artist in the family, it can be a great place to show off his or her work. Is it getting harder for one person to keep the family informed? A Web site is a great bulletin board or newsletter that can be read anywhere in the world. Any entrepreneurs on your list will jump at the chance to showcase their business and start to establish a presence.

However, maintaining a site can seem time-consuming and technologically complex. However, with the right hosting service, it doesn't have to be nearly as hard as you think.

For example, 1&1 offers Web site packages for less than $5 a month. Not only can you get the space, they provide service and support, too.

You don't need to be a Web expert to create your own site. You get all the tools you need, both software and customer support. They'll even guide you through the process step by step.

A Web domain makes a great holiday gift.

You can have your site up and running in less than half an hour, even if you know very little about computers. You can even get the latest features, such as Flash, instant messaging and bulletin board systems for feedback or to build a community.

You can get everything you need in one place. You have complete control of your information and can modify all page elements without any hassle at all.

There's even a referral program that can earn you a commission of up to $80 for each new customer.

Live customer support is available 24 hours a day, and there's a 90-day, no-questions-asked, money-back guarantee.
