A New Way To Get Connected To The Internet

(NAPSA)—The convenience that many experience when using the Internet at work can often turn to frustration at home.

That's because most commercial Internet users have a DSL or high-speed Internet connection. This type of connection makes it faster to connect to the Internet and usually makes navigating the Internet much easier.

However, since a high-speed connection can be relatively expensive, many consumers feel forced to stay with a less-expensive—but much slower—dial-up system for home Internet use.

Now, thanks to the world's largest network of family-oriented campgrounds, there may be an alternative. KOA is offering consumers a higher-speed Internet connection service—an ISP—that is part of a plan to bring the Internet to campers at its 500 campgrounds.

The network provides dial-up Internet access that's up to six times faster than traditional dial-up Internet services at a cost that is less expensive than most high speed or DSL connections for the home.

Called KOA Konnect, the service also offers features such as:

- around-the-clock award-winning customer service
- 12,300 dial-up numbers
- Instant messaging
- Virus and spam protection

A network of family campgrounds now offers consumers Internet access that is said to be six times faster than most dial-up ISP connections.

- 10 e-mail accounts
- 100 MB of personal Web space
- free access to the nationwide HOTSPOTZZ wireless network.

This makes it possible to enjoy wireless Internet access at cafes, hotels, restaurants, airports and selected KOA Campgrounds.

The service is available for less than $20 per month. If you have a KOA Value Kard, you can receive a discount on this service as well as reduced daily registration fees at campgrounds and more. You can learn more about this by visiting www.koakonnect.com or call toll free 1-877-814-5574.
