(NAPSA)—A brand new customizable online college planner is getting top grades from students and their families.

With more than three million high school students graduating in 2006, Petersons.com is quickly becoming the ultimate online destination for college-planning and preparation.

College-bound students now have an online resource to help them make important decisions.

Not only does this site have search tools to help students find, manage and compare a list of potential schools, it also offers a complete online planner to keep things neat and organized.

Among the most popular features of the site are the downloadable podcasts that cover such topics as understanding the early decision application, interpreting your financial aid award letter and taking advantage of the SAT subject tests.

Another cool feature for tech-savvy teens is the free monthly college-planning newsletter—now available as an RSS feed.

There's even a free scholarship search with awards totaling $7.9 billion. To learn more, visit www.petersons.com.
