“Play For A Billion” Sweepstakes

Damon Wayans hosts a show in which one lucky contestant could win $1 billion. Specially marked products have details.

(NAPSA)—Consumers around the United States can win the chance to play for $1 billion through a “Play for a Billion” promotion.

To enter, check specially marked Pepsi products for sweepstakes entry codes through mid-August. Enter codes at www.BillionSweeps.com. Two hundred contestants will be randomly selected to play for the grand prize on an ABC television special that will air in September.

Even if no one wins the billion-dollar prize, one contestant is guaranteed to win $1 million. Damon Wayans, star of ABC’s “My Wife and Kids,” will host the show.

West Virginia resident and teacher, Richard Bay, won the first “Play for a Billion” sweepstakes. He missed the $1 billion grand prize—based on a six-digit random number selection—by two digits but still walked away with $1 million.

Editor’s Note: Contest ends August 17, 2004, so please do not run after that date.
