

Beauty Trends

Restoring Volume

(NAPSA)—The science of skin care keeps improving, offering newer ways to restore radiance and volume to aging skin.

“As we age, there is both a dramatic loss and redistribution of essential elements in the skin, including collagen, hyaluronic acid and even fat,” said Dr. Paul Jarrod Frank, a New York City-based dermatologist.

“These changes lead to deflated and hanging tissue, much like a well-filled balloon that loses air over time.”

Dr. Frank

The latest cream can help plump, hydrate and revolumize skin’s appearance, fighting common signs of aging.

“People have sought injections to return the volume needed for a youthful look and counteract this mid-face sink,” said Frank. “Inspired by these trends, GoodSkin Labs created Filextra, a simple and powerful facial cream that helps plump, hydrate and revolumize skin’s appearance.”

For more information, visit GoodSkin Labs at www.goodskinlabs.com.