School Tool Review

(NAPSA)—The right learning tools can help build academic success. Here's a look at some of the latest student aids:

Elementary students who rely on their parents' college level dictionaries to look up vocabulary words, study for spelling bees or write structured sentences might benefit from a book such as Webster's New World Children's Dictionary (Wiley, $17.95). The reference tool is filled with updated, age-appropriate new entries including euro, East Timor and George W. Bush.

The Web site CliffNotes.com posts study notes on 180 classic titles and can be viewed for free. The guides were written by teachers and respected literary scholars. In addition, students can visit the site to access downloads of study guides, an interactive advice column and more.

A book series called Shakespeare on the Double! (Wiley, $8.99) can help students get a better handle on the Bard's works.

The books provide a modern English translation next to Shakespeare's original writings. They also provide character lists and character maps, as well as reflective questions to help facilitate learning.
