Sportscasters Earn Points For Olympic Style

(NAPSA)—This year, Olympic reporting may focus on more than one kind of score. With working wardrobes supplied by Liz Claiborne, viewers may rate women sportscasters on how well they are turned out while they report on the twists and turns of the world-ranked sports. Broadcasting the Salt Lake Games for NBC this year are (above) Hannah Storm, as the daytime host, in a Liz Claiborne Collection blazer; Summer Sanders, a four-time Olympic medalist in swimming who reports on special features; Beth Ruyak, NBC's figure skating reporter; and figure skating analyst Sandra Bezic, a 1972 Olympian. The carefully styled and versatile looks worn by these broadcasters help them look their professional best. For more information, call 1-800-555-9838 or visit www.lizclaiborne.com.
