

YOUR GARDEN

The Color Of Roses

(NAPSA)—A rose is a rose is a rose? That's a thorny subject, especially given the vibrant, cheerful and exciting colors of this year's All-America Rose Selections (AARS) 2001 winners. These striking varieties with their novel beauty are now available at retail garden stores and through selected catalogs.

New AARS rose varieties add beauty and color to any garden.

Both professional growers and amateur gardeners are delighted by these stunning AARS roses, which include:

- Sun Sprinkles—A bright yellow miniature, bursting into life early and often.
- Marmalade Skies—A tangerine orange floribunda, bearing an entire bouquet of continuous blooms on each stem.
- Glowing Peace—A grandiflora, combining timeless beauty and modern novelty, with golden yellow and cantaloupe-blended petals.

When you plant these disease-resistant roses, you'll find them compatible and beautiful; these AARS roses are likely to become the new focal point of your garden.