The Seiko Coutura Collection: A Seamless Blend Of Innovation And Refined Style

(NAPSA)—The Coutura collection is one of the top-selling collections in Seiko history. It houses every caliber of Seiko technology, and the contemporary styling and high-tech innovations continue to lead the industry. For the 2006 holiday season, the company is unveiling two new men's models—the Coutura World Timer and the Coutura Kinetic Chronograph—as well as the beautiful, diamond Multi-Hand Calendar for women.

The Coutura World Timer represents a new pinnacle of design and engineering. The chiseled bezel is microengraved with 24 cities that represent 23 world time zones. The dial features three subdials—one for the alarm, one for the second hand, and one to keep track of the local time at home. The main hands track the time wherever you travel. The Coutura World Timer comes in two styles and retails for $475.00.

Seiko invented the world's first human-powered quartz watch, called Kinetic, and the watch has captured the attention of fans everywhere, including watch aficionado Jay Leno. The Coutura Kinetic Chronograph takes the power of human movement to astonishing new levels of accuracy and style.

The new Coutura Kinetic Chronograph, a flawless blend of striking design and precision timekeeping, is the showcase for an unparalleled human-powered technology that was decades in the making. Every movement of your arm generates the energy that powers this multifunctioned timepiece. The watch's power reserve stores enough energy to keep it running for five months when you take it off. But its sleek, eye-catching design is so stunning you won't want to.

The battery will never need to be changed, and you can see the reason—the famous Kinetic movement—through the transparent caseback.

The Coutura Kinetic Chronograph sells for $695.00, and is available in a gold-tone or two-tone bracelet.

For women, Seiko has unveiled the Coutura Multi-Hand Calendar, which sparkles with 20 girls' best friends. The new Coutura Diamond Multi-Hand Calendar features three subdials: one houses a 24-hour hand, the other two are used for the calendar function—one for day and one for date. There are four models to choose from: a stainless steel bracelet featuring a light blue dial, a soft pink or white and pink mother-of-pearl dial, or a two-tone bracelet with a patterned silver dial. Retail prices start at $525.00.
