

TRAVEL TIPS

Vital Travel Phrases In Any Language

(NAPSA)—If you're ever in trouble when travelling—say you've lost your way or your wallet, you're not feeling well or something even worse happens—a few choice phrases can come in handy.

For example, to say “please” in French, Italian, Dutch, Russian, Spanish and German, it's s'il vous plait, per favore, astublieft, prosze, por favor and bitte.

To help further, a leading provider of language learning software is offering a free set of vital travel phrases in a number of languages.

Complete with audio for proper pronunciation, this intelligent flashcard software makes learning important parts of a foreign language effective and even fun. Tourists, students and business travelers can rapidly learn critical words and phrases in each language. The program tracks their progress, recognizes achievement and reviews the words and phrases they're having the most trouble with.

This revolutionary system of frequent, successful learning experiences ensures that adults enjoy a delightful, thorough exposure to the basics of each language. The Before You Know It travel cards makes it possible for individuals to successfully master a language by effectively applying skills in a rich, interactive learning environment.

What's the good word? You'll know it, wherever in the world you may go, with help from a free language learning system.

The fundamental travel list covers such vital terms as “I don't understand,” “Can you help me” and “I only speak a little (of the language).”

The Before You Know It system from Transparent Languages, Inc. is downloadable from any Internet connection so travelers can learn on the fly.

You can discover more online at www.byki.com/travelcards and then you may be able to say oui, si, ja, tak or sim—that is, “yes”—to the question of whether you can deal with difficulties when far from home.