

Website Promotes Products Made In U.S.A.

(NAPSA)—There's good news for those who would like to shop in a way that helps to create jobs in the U.S. and promotes businesses that are kind to the environment.

There's a website that offers over 3,800 products—all made in the U.S.A.—from over 600 American companies, many of which are family owned.

The products on the site—called MadeinUSAForever.com—range from clothing to personal care items to home furnishings and furniture—and more.

Shoppers will find many familiar brands, such as Schaefer Ranchwear, men's clothing by Anderson-Little, robes by Telegraph Hill and bedding by Maine Heritage Weavers.

The site was founded by Todd Lipscomb. Lipscomb spent over 10 years in the high-tech industry and is author of the book "Re-Made in The USA" (Wiley & Sons 2011). His goal with the site is to provide an easy, fun way to buy products made in the U.S.A.

Said Lipscomb, "When you buy goods made in the U.S.A., you help create jobs and keep the American economy growing. Plus, U.S. manufacturing processes are much cleaner for the environment than those in many other countries."

He believes that many brands sold in the U.S. are produced in countries using dangerous, heavily polluting processes. That means when you purchase American-made products, you know that you're helping to keep the world a little cleaner for your children.
