What To Do When You Fall Head Over Heels

(NAPS)—Celebrating Valentine's day in unusual ways can help you and that certain someone become irresistible targets for Cupid and his bow. If you've only got eyes for her, follow these tips to really sweep her off her feet:

- Surprise Her At Work. Take her mind off her daily stress with a nice romantic lunch. Go the extra mile and really impress her by arranging ahead of time with her boss for her to have the rest of the afternoon off.

- Plan A Romantic Evening For The Fifteenth. Give her a small gift on Valentine's Day, and surprise her with a big present on the fifteenth. It could start a trend, making the day after Valentine's Day your own special day. This might help to make your relationship unique and more exciting.

- Get Rid Of That Stubble. If you haven't been getting as close of a shave as you (or she) might like, a new razor could be the solution. The Norelco Quadra Action Shaver uses new technology featuring holes to catch the short hairs and slots to cut the long hairs. This can give you an unexpectedly close shave without any nicks or cuts so you can snuggle without the stubble. And guys, the Quadra is even easy to clean—simply rinse it under the sink.

- Do The Things She Likes. Plan a day of activities that she enjoys and that the two of you might not ordinarily do together.

This year, a close shave may help you get closer to your Valentine.

For example, take her to a show, her favorite sporting event or a museum. She might appreciate the fact that you are willing to make an effort to ensure her happiness.

- Baby Your Baby. She pampers you all year, why not pamper her? Book her a full day at the spa and then spend a romantic evening at dinner and a show.
